FAIL TO PAY GAS BILL AND ABANDON AUTO

Two Youths Leave
Service Station
With 10 Gallons
Of Gas.

Two young men, who drove away from an Emmitsburg gasoline service station, Friday evening, without paying for ten gallons of gasoline, drove to Gettysburg and abandoned the light coupe on West High street in front of the home of J. C. Hoke about 10:30 o'clock.

The Rev. Father Mark E. Stock, rector of St. Francis Xavier Catholic church, who lives opposite the Hoke home, heard the car stop and saw the two occupants leave the machine.

At the Fitzgerald gasoline service station, Emmitsburg, the pair asked for ten gallons of gasoline. After the fuel was put into the machine, the pair asked for beer. Fitzgerald said he could not bring the beer out of the service station, and the men said they would drive their car to the door.

When Fitzgerald went inside for the beer, the men drove away. The car, which is believed to have been stolen at Wheeling, West Virginia, had two different license plates. The front tag was No. 114-538 while the rear tag was No. 82-600.

When the men left the machine, they failed to turn off the ignition, and the battery was about exhausted today. The machine also was out of oil, and when an effort was made to start it, the car sounded as though a bearing was burned out.

Fitzgerald came to Gettysburg, Friday evening, and reported the theft of the gasoline to Corporal Arthur B. Snyder, of the state police. Fitzgerald had the rear license number of the machine. The officer and Fitzgerald were unsuccessful in their search for the pair in town, Friday evening.

Car Found Here
This morning, the Rev. Father Stock reported to Corporal Snyder that the car which stopped opposite the rectory, Friday evening, was still there this morning.

The car is a 1933 model with only 5,910 miles on the speedometer. A tag in the machine showed that it had been greased at a Wheeling garage.

A car, bearing the name "Rev. Wisnerich," was found in the car.

Proprietors Feel Minimum Wage Scale Of $14 Per Week Is Too High.

Restaurant proprietors of Gettysburg will meet at the court house, Monday morning at 10 o'clock, to discuss the government's national recovery administration plans as they affect their business.

Several local restaurant proprietors today expressed the opinion that the minimum wages for their employees may be more than they are able to pay.

One local restaurant proprietor said he is paying his waitresses $7 a week and giving them their board. In addition to their wages and board, the girls make several dollars a week in tips. The minimum wage for work of this character is set at $14 a week by the government's code.

The restaurant proprietors said they probably would have to hire additional waitresses so that the girls would not work more than the 40-hour-a-week minimum specified in the government's code received (Continued on Page 2)

MARTIAL LAW IS DECLARED BY GOVERNOR

300 National Guardsmen Sent To Fayette
County Coal Fields.

ARE ORDERED TO RESTORE ORDER

Harrisburg, July 29 (AP)—In a proclamation today Governor Pinchot declared virtual martial law in Fayette county soft coal fields.

Although careful to avoid direct use of the term the governor's advisers said the declaration is tantamount to martial law and was patterned after the proclamation that sent troops to the Pittsburgh railroad strike in 1877.

Earlier in the day the governor ordered 300 Pennsylvania national guardsmen to quell disorders that had harassed the section during a dispute of authority between the governor and Sheriff Harry E. Hackney. The sheriff Friday refused to withdraw deputies and give state police full charge in the coal fields.

Leave From Camps
The state soldiers equipped with automatic rifles entrained at dawn at Mt. Gretna, summer encampment of the national guard, and started for Brownsville where they are due during the afternoon.

The troops comprised the second battalion 112th Infantry in command of Major Kenneth Momeyer. The battalion is from Erie.

Meantime 15,000 to 16,000 miners seeking to enforce union recognition are on strike. More than 20 mines are shut down in the Brownsville area. Ten casualties have resulted from sporadic rifle and pistol fire and violence in clashes between deputies and pickets within the last four days.

The sheriff ordered his deputies to take the field at 4 a. m. and enforce orders he had issued against forming groups on state highways and said the deputies would be withdrawn on the arrival of state troops.

"My position is clearly stated in my telegram to the governor," Hackney said. "Under the circumstances I have done all I can. It is plain the governor meant he would be in control. He is."

To Restore Order
The governor in a statement explained the reason for dispatching the troops.

"I have sent the national guard into the strike region to restore order and to see that the constitution and laws of Pennsylvania are respected. I have instructed the guards to protect all citizens in (Continued on Page 2)

Watch, Still Running, and Vest, Lost During Battles Here, Found After 20 Years

Otto Reinhold, prominent Pittsburgh manufacturer, who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Scharf, at the Hotel Gettysburg, lays claim to the greatest "story" emanating from the three days' battles at Gettysburg.

Otto admits that he is not the author of the "story," but that he heard it first hand from a veteran who participated in the battles here and who recently passed away.

Otto relates the following "yarn": "Cooney Schlegel, the greatest cheese man who ever came out of Pittsburgh, was one of the few privates who fought in the civil war. Cooney was proud of his rank and immensely proud of his skirmishes with the Confederates, in which Cooney said he always came out on top with one exception—and that one exception was erased after 20 years.

"Cooney was in the thick of the fighting at Gettysburg. There came a lull in the hostilities, during which the soldiers, damp with

Urges United Campaign To Attract Trade

The following communication, received by The Times, is self-explanatory. It was received following publication of an article in Friday's edition relative to the decrease in tourist traffic to Gettysburg.

The communication follows:
July 28, 1933.

The Editor,
The Gettysburg Times,
Gettysburg, Pa.,
Dear Sir:

I think that the article in your paper tonight, in regard to visitors this year is a very timely one. I want to say that it is high-time that all who are interested in catering to the tourist trade here, get together, form an association, adopt some uniform rules and regulations, provide a fund for a definite plan of advertising that will be so attractive and far-reaching that strangers will be well informed about this broad and beautiful reservation and will not think that it is just a cemetery with a few monuments, as I have heard more than one visitor admit.

I suggest that this association be organized at once, and that we all forget our petty jealousies and grievances, and be glad to offer and to accept plans that will help us all individually. To work together to do our best to make folks everywhere want to come and see for themselves that this is truly not only one of the most hallowed spots in our land but one of the most naturally beautiful.

A TOURIST HOME HOSTESS.

Guides Will Be Theatre Guests Wednesday Night

One hundred battlefield guides will be guests of Irving Mirisch, manager of the Majestic theatre, Wednesday night, at the showing of "Best of Enemies."

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 29 (AP).—Franklin D. Roosevelt came home today for the first time as president of the United States.

A broad smile spread as Mr. Roosevelt walked from his special train amidst a crowd of old friends and neighbors. His greeting with his mother at the station was drowned out by the cheers of the gathering.

"Hello, Sam" and "How are you, Ed?" were heard from the president as he shook hands all around before departing by auto from the depot to the family estate at Crum Elbow nearby.

With Mrs. Roosevelt at his side and his mother on the doorstep the happy chief executive waited for a moment before entering his home to chat with local officials.

PICKETING MAYOR CITED FOR TRIAL AT OCEAN CITY
Atlantic City, July 29.—When a city administration follows the example of striking labor organizations by "picketing," it is violating the law, Vice Chancellor Sooy declared Friday.

The vice chancellor ordered that Mayor Headley, of Ocean City, should cause next Tuesday why he should not be restrained from keeping a policeman in front of the restaurant of Mrs. Margaret B. Murray to warn away patrons.

Arguments by counsel at a hearing in chambers Friday brought out that Mrs. Murray's husband had been arrested for beer-selling, which is not allowed under the ordinances of Ocean City. The mayor therefore had revoked the wife's restaurant license.

Full Expose of Chicago Racketeering Is Promised
Chicago, July 29 (AP).—The story of how prosecutors battled against the blind, unreasoning fear of witnesses for weeks to obtain the evidence upon which twenty-four persons were indicted for conspiracy to prey upon and restrain legitimate trade was told Friday.

The evidence upon which the first indictments against racketeers were based, said Edwin J. Raber, special assistant state's attorney, would take two months to relate before a jury.

Many Others To Be Assessed
"When we've finished," said Mr. Raber, a diminutive, active prosecutor, "the shades will have been pulled off racketeering in Chicago for all time. The twenty-four men indicted are only a few of those who will be brought to trial eventually."

Even when most of the profits of their dry cleaning, laundry or carbonated beverage businesses were being drained by racketeers, Mr. Raber said, most of the witnesses were crazed by fear when brought before the grand jury.

To obtain the evidence, policemen in plain clothes posed as customers and employed casual conversation to learn elementary facts from the business men.

Fear Silenced By Promises
The witness then was brought before the grand jury and confronted with his chance remarks. In most cases his fear was overcome by promises of complete protection for himself and his family, and of cessation of extortion and labor troubles.

Legal authorities said the defendants, ranging from Capone to the heads of and attorneys for unions and trade associations, probably would contend they were not guilty of restraining trade as charged in the indictments because they dealt only in "service," such as laundry and dry cleaning, but not in commodities. Raber said state supreme courts had varied on that point.

Regarding the price-fixing charges, an attorney for Dr. Squires said his client was no more guilty than was President Roosevelt and the industrial control commission.

558 Witnesses Were Called
Most of the witnesses insisted on going before the grand jury fortnightly and without escort from their homes or places of business. Each cooperating witness gave names of others who could give valuable testimony. In all, 558 witnesses were called.

SIX HURT IN 2 EXPLOSIONS

Bombs Believed Attached To Electric Switches In Doctors' Offices.

Paterson, N. J., July 29 (AP).—Seven persons were seriously injured Friday when the turning on of an electric light switches in two chiropractors' offices exploded bombs believed by police to have been placed by a maniac.

The bombs exploded within ten minutes of each other in the offices of Dr. Charles Baumbler in the Citizens Trust company building and of Dr. Peter J. Barber at 86 Broadway, six blocks away.

Alone In Office
Dr. Barber, alone in his office, suffered contusions as he turned the light switch.

The other six injured all were waiting in the office of Dr. Baumbler, who was not injured.

Police attached significance to the fact that a bomb was found two weeks ago attached to the automobile of another chiropractor, Dr. Alfred Post, on which a mechanic was working in an east side garage. Because of this coincidence investigators offered the theory a mentally unbalanced person had a grudge against the chiropractors.

Listed As Injured
Those injured are: Mrs. Pauline Carino, 58, Paterson; Mrs. Christine Kramer, 29, of Haledon; her daughter, Shirley, 4; Mrs. Sadie Brocca, 52, of Haledon; Mangold Ellenbogen, 50, Paterson, and Elmer Smith, 15, of West Paterson.

All are expected to recover.

The nature of the bombs was not immediately learned. They shattered the fixtures and destroyed furnishings in both offices.

WELLES MEETS CUBAN CHIEFS

American Ambassador Confers With Political Leaders Of Island.

Havana, July 29 (AP).—Government and opposition delegates met with Sumner Welles, United States ambassador, Friday for their second discussion of constitutional reforms. The American envoy is acting as mediator in Cuban political affairs.

The participants in the two-hour meeting, the second in the series which began Thursday at the American embassy, said rapid progress was being made. They praised the will to achieve results displayed by all the conferees.

Accord Reported Reached
It was learned that agreement was reached on several fundamental points of the reform program, notably those having to do with personal rights.

Members of the opposition factions have charged President Gerardo Machado with disregarding personal rights guaranteed by the constitution of 1901 and amended in 1928.

Several times the executive, believing his regime threatened, has received of congress authority to suspend the eight constitutional articles guaranteeing personal rights.

When the revolt of August, 1931, broke out he suspended the guarantees throughout the island. The suspension remained in effect until last December 1, when the guarantees were restored in five provinces. They were restored in Havana province only last Wednesday following upon the passage of an amnesty bill covering political offenses committed since January, 1927.

Havana newspapers gave prominence to an address of Welles before the conferees at the embassy Friday in which he said that in his official capacity he is "the ambassador of a nation which is the closest friend that the Republic of Cuba possesses, and the representative of a president of the United States who is deeply interested in Cuba's welfare."

Policemen Badly Beaten
The president told congress Wednesday that the mediation "represents no foreign government."

Disorders in the island Thursday persons were injured were reported and Friday night in which several have been largely communistic in nature.

their constitutional rights and to suppress all violence whether it comes from operators, deputy sheriffs or miners," the governor said.

"The miners have the right to organize, to picket peacefully and to assemble in meetings," the state added.

"The mine operators have the right to protection of their property. The national guards will protect the rights of all. It is impartial and will remain so."

Wants Money Back For Losses
When Somebody Cornered Corn
Chicago, July 29 (AP).—A Minneapolis grain dealer who lost money when some one allegedly cornered the corn market back in 1928 asked the federal court Friday for a peek at government grain records so that he could sue to recover from who ever manipulated the corner.

When the request for immediate action, made on behalf of E. W. Backus, was refused a suit for $1,000,000 was filed against three Chicagoans who, as he alleged, engineered a 9,000,000-bushel "corner" against him in the July corn market in 1928.

The "corner," Backus said, cost him about $300,000, but the suit was filed under the Sherman anti-trust act, which permits the aggrieved individual to recover his losses threefold. The supreme court of the United States has ruled that a grain corner, supposedly impossible under present grain exchange restrictions, comes under the provisions of the act as a conspiracy in restraint of trade.

The suit was filed against Gustavus F. Swift, head of Swift & Co. packing house; Herbert J. Blum and Allan Moore, all members of the Chicago board of trade.

Filing of the suit was precipitated by the refusal of Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward to act immediately on a bill of discovery filed by Morris Townley, attorney for Backus, and directed at L. A. Fitz, grain futures act administrator here, to compel him to reveal the corn holdings of the three defendants in July, 1928.

Judge Woodward insisted on a full hearing, pointing out that the government has twenty days to file an answer to the bill of discovery. Townley replied that the time limit for filing suit, five years, will expire Monday. He dropped the bill issue. An hour later the suit was filed.

Fitz said the whole grain futures administration largely rests on secrecy. There had never been a direct attack on the secrecy provision, he said.

The Minneapolis dealer said he sold 950,000 bushels of July corn at $1.06, the prevailing price in early July, 1928, but that market operators acquired the 9,000,000 available bushels of corn and large quantities in excess of the available supply with the result that prices soared and he had to settle his contracts at $1.20 1/2 a bushel.

MUSSOLINI TO CELEBRATE 50TH BIRTHDAY TODAY
Rome, July 29 (AP).—Premier Benito Mussolini became half a century old today.

He spent his fiftieth birthday quietly at Riccione, the Adriatic resort where he went Friday after two days of conference with Premier Goemboes of Hungary. With his family, Il Duce went in sea bathing.

He expects a gift, however, even though a small one, from his grandson, Fabrizio, son of his daughter Edda and Count Galeazzo Ciano. Count and Countess Ciano brought Il Duce's only grandchild back from Shanghai a few months ago, where Count Ciano was Italian consul-general.

That he does not want to give the impression of growing older is indicated by the fact that when the Cianos arrived from Shanghai the newspapers were forbidden to speak of Mussolini as a grandfather. No photograph of little Fabrizio has been published anywhere in Italy.

The HIDDEN DOOR

By FRANK L. PACKARD

SYNOPSIS: The Mask has killed Reddy Turner in Colin Hewitt's apartment, and wounded Colin, a writer of detective fiction. Reddy had asked a promise from Colin that should Reddy be "put on the spot," Colin would try to deliver a letter Reddy had left hidden in his room. Reddy had hoped to "get" the Mask, who was responsible for the death of Reddy's sister. Now the Mask telephones Colin on his first day out of the hospital to say that the writer has nothing to fear, provided he does not meddle. Detective Sergeant Tim Mulvey is in the room at the time.

Chapter Six

DAINGEROUS QUEST

Detective Sergeant Mulvey jerked his hand toward the telephone instrument.

"Why don't you do what you'd do in a story?" he inquired with a short laugh.

"What's that?"

"Scene of us trying frantically to trace the telephone call."

Colin shook his head.

"I wouldn't do that in a story," he said. "Granting the Mask even a modest degree of intelligence, and I rank him far above that, it would be obviously useless. The call came from some place like the Grand Central where there are a number of public booths—not from a drug-store where there is only a single booth and where he might have been noticed and a description of him obtained."

"Check!" grinned Detective Sergeant Mulvey. "Fair enough! Well, what did he say?"

"He complimented about my intimacy with you," replied Colin drily. "He said the reason he shot me due to the possibility that Reddy might have given me some inside information which I in turn would hand over to the police, but that the police work on the case had been so ridiculous that he was convinced I knew nothing that would be of any value to you."

"I'll remember that when I get my hands on him!" snapped Sergeant Mulvey. "What else?"

"He said I had nothing more to fear from him providing I did not meddle, but that otherwise I would not live twenty-four hours. He suggested that instead of expending my time with you I go away somewhere—for my health."

"Anything more?"

Colin smiled a little provocatively. "Only a personal fling at you," he said. "He seems to be keeping pretty close tabs on what is going on. He knew you were here to-night, and he knew where we were and what we were doing this afternoon. He said that even Detective Sergeant Mulvey might have known he had never had his picture taken as Colonel Hargreaves."

Sergeant Mulvey, preked, bit viciously on the stub of his cigar.

"Oh, yeah?" he drawled. "Well, I've known of an identification or two being pulled off that way with less to go on. But forget that! So he warned you to lay off, did he?"

Colin nodded.

"Well, that's one point on which I agree with him," announced Sergeant Mulvey decisively. "From to-night you're through. This is a police job."

"Reddy said it wasn't."

"Yes—and you know what happened to Reddy! Well, it's not going to happen to you if I can help it. Look here, I know how you feel about both Reddy and the sister you knew as a kid, to say nothing of anything on your own account, and that you'd let everything go to hell, yourself included, to get the bird that did it."

"But there isn't anything more you can do. You've done all you can. You've told us all you know. You're out of the picture from now on. It ain't going to be healthy for you to hobnob around with me—and you're not going to get a chance to, anyway, until this case is cleaned up."

"Whatever I think of this Mask swine, I'm not kidding myself on one point. He's a killer. You get away from here—take a good long trip."

"Run away, you mean?" inquired Colin thinly.

"Run away nothing!" snorted Sergeant Mulvey. "It ain't as though you were shirking anything by going, or could accomplish anything by staying. And, besides everything else, you need a change, and you need it bad. You ain't fit by a long way yet."

Colin was silent for a moment.

"It's human nature," he said finally with a queer smile, "to be afraid of appearing to be afraid. And I have never been threatened. As a matter of fact, however, I have been thinking for some time of going away as soon as I got out of the hospital."

"The first part of what you say," declared Sergeant Mulvey forcibly, "is the bunk where you are concerned. What do you care if this Mask guy thinks he's put one over on you—there's nobody else to make a chorus of it. As for the second part, it's the best news I've had since I heard the depression was over. Don't weaken, bo! Where were you thinking of going?"

Colin was thinking of a curtain pole.

"I haven't the faintest idea," he said.

"Well, no matter," said Detective Sergeant Mulvey. "Go somewhere! I've got to go home." He picked up his hat. "That's a go, eh?"

Colin walked with the other to the door.

"Well, perhaps," he said.

"Nix on the 'perhaps' stuff!" shot back Detective Sergeant Mulvey. "I'll run you out of town myself, if I have to!"

Colin laughed.

"We'll see," he said. "You're a good scout, Tim. Good-night."

"So are you—but don't play the fool!" returned Sergeant Mulvey. "Good-night."

Colin closed the door, and, re-crossing the room, pulled out one of the lower drawers of his desk, from which, hidden under a pile of odds and ends, he produced a bunch of skeleton keys. He looked at his watch.

It was twenty-seven minutes past twelve.

For a moment, his brows knitted, Colin stood there staring at the keys in his hand. Then, abruptly, he thrust them into his pocket, selected a soft felt hat from the stand, switched off the lights, opened the door, stepped out in the warm June night, and locked the door behind him.

And then for an instant he remained motionless.

MICE AND MATCHES BLAMED FOR BLAZE

Carlisle—Mice and matches are blamed for a blaze which on Thursday night leveled a barn on the estate of the late J. K. Ziegler, along the Sterrett's Gap road, a mile north of Carlisle. Heirs of the Ziegler estate, owners of the property, placed damage at about $2,000, part of which was covered by insurance.

Also consumed in the blaze was about two tons of timothy hay, harvested last summer, and equipment for acetylene home lighting including a large tank and lighting fixtures. Two automobiles, a wagon and a goat were removed before the flames had spread too far.

TWO NIRA MEETINGS NEXT WEEK IN CARLISLE

Carlisle—Two meetings next week at which employers will discuss the national industrial recovery act were arranged Thursday night at a meeting of the Carlisle Nira campaign committee in the office of the Chamber of Commerce.

Because no further information was available for the meeting Thursday night, permanent organization of the committee was deferred. John M. Hoy, president of the Chamber of Commerce, presided.

MESS HALL IS NEARING COMPLETION

Frederick—With the new mess hall constructed by the civilian conservation corps at its camp on Fishing creek watershed almost ready for occupancy, heads of the camp, as well as the reforestation rookies, are looking forward to eating in style next week. Practically all of the construction, including the mess hall, tent floors and other work by the conservation corps and the bath house by the city of Frederick, has been completed and work at the camp is making satisfactory progress.

TREE FALLS INTO CARROLL CREEK

Frederick—Loosened, apparently when the rain soaked the dry ground about its small roots, a fair-sized willow tree on the north bank of Carroll creek, adjoining the parking grounds, tumbled over into the creek Thursday morning. A companion tree a few feet away appeared unmoved by the act of the first tree, which had been leaning somewhat. No automobiles were parked in the vicinity and the crash was almost unnoticed except for the attention of Officer Crum, who was nearby and who reported the happening to the city engineering department.

GRIPE AND PNEUMONIA CASES NOT REPORTED

Frederick—Gripe and pneumonia have claimed a number of victims in Frederick city and county, but official reports of patients suffering from the diseases have not been made to the county health office, it was learned Thursday morning.

Dr. E. C. Keefe, county health officer, stated from his new location in the academy building, that only one case of pneumonia was reported and that health conditions generally are good. A renovation of the lower floor of the academy is in progress to install the health department, which moved there recently, and plans for clinics, inspection of summer camps and canning factories were discussed.

The fishermen came on to Waynesboro by automobile and Pilot Pottoff waited until 5 o'clock and then flew blindly through the pass west of Monterey and landed the plane at the Blue Ridge airport.

CORE WALL IN DAM TO BE REPAIRED

JOHNSON, CAR MAKERS MEET

Recovery Administrator Flies To Detroit In Reference To Code.

Detroit, July 29 (AP).—The automobile industry's code of fair competition, as yet unreported to the recovery administration, presumably brought Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, here Thursday night in a speedy, unannounced airplane flight from Washington.

While no official advice of his visit was made in automotive circles, the general understanding was that the recovery administrator, hoping for speedy presentation of the automotive code, planned a hasty conference with Alvan Macauley, president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, and with other directors of the association.

To Return At Once

Johnson, arriving at the municipal airport, said he planned to confer at once with directors of the N. A. C. C. and would return last night to Washington. He said he came to Detroit "of my own notion," and declined to discuss the nature of the conference. He said he did not now whether he would see Henry Ford.

Directors of the N. A. C. C. closed the last of a series of conferences here Wednesday night without presenting their code. Those responsible for its formation said at the time that delay was regarded as essential until a majority of manufacturers accepted it. Meanwhile, they passed a resolution favoring an increase in wages August 1 for some 200,000 automotive workers.

GEN. O'RYAN NAMED FOR NEW YORK MAYOR

New York, July 29.—Fusion leaders Thursday broke the deadlock with which they have struggled for several weeks and named Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan, independent democrat, as their candidate for mayor in the fall elections.

With the selection of General O'Ryan, the fusionists defied Samuel Seabury, who was insistent on the selection of Representative Fiorello H. LaGuardia for head of the ticket. Seabury declared the action "a complete and disgraceful sell-out to Tammany Hall."

As a peace move, LaGuardia has been offered the nomination for president of the board of aldermen. Every effort will be made to induce him to accept that place on the ticket.

NOTED FOOTBALL COACH IN CRITICAL CONDITION

Cohasset, Mass., July 29.—The condition of Maj. Frank W. Cavanaugh, 57, famous football coach and war hero, who is in a critical condition at a hospital here following a recent operation, is reported "just the same."

Cavanaugh has been in failing health for several years as result of shrapnel wounds received in the Argonne forest shortly before the armistice.

He coached numerous school and college teams, including Dartmouth, Boston college, Fordham and Holy Cross, during the thirty-five years of his career.

Make the Pennies Bigger

WHEN James Buchanan was President and tall beaver hats were in vogue; when gentlemen wore broad cravats and ladies wore hoop skirts, the pennies they tossed to children were as big as quarters. But the cart-wheel coppers your grandfather got for keeping his lace collar clean were not as big in buying powers as the pennies of today.

A penny then might buy a pastry, or ten of them take one to the Fair, but your great-aunt and great-uncle couldn't have gone to a movie at any price.

Sixty years ago the ladies could go shopping for dry goods and buy silks that would make you green with envy, linens that were linens and broadcloths that beggar description. But what their favorite store did not have they usually got along without.

You can pick up your daily newspaper and in fifteen minutes you can know what the different shops are offering in fabrics, patterns, varieties and qualities that great-grandmother never dreamed could be gathered together under any conditions.

Times have changed, and so have merchandise and business methods. One of the influences that has helped to bring about so much of change, that has helped to multiply opportunities and increase the spending size of our pennies is advertising.

Every merchant, every manufacturer knows that advertising materially reduces selling costs by increasing the demand for the distribution of the products of hundreds of thousands of mills. Indeed, many of the things we count today as necessities or simple luxuries could not be made and sold at their reasonable prices except as advertising has created a broad market for them, making millions of sales at little prices and little profits.

Therefore hear, ye nations, and know, O congregation, what is among them.

Hear, O earth: behold, I will bring evil upon this people, even the fruit of their thoughts, because they have not hearkened unto my words, nor to my law, but rejected it.

To what purpose cometh there to me incense from Sheba, and the sweet cane from a far country? your burnt offerings are not acceptable, nor your sacrifice sweet unto me.

Therefore thus saith the Lord, Behold I will lay stumbling blocks before this people, and the fathers and the sons together shall fall upon them; the neighbour and his friend shall perish.

Thus saith the Lord, Behold, a people cometh from the north country, and a great nation shall be raised from the sides of the earth.

They shall lay hold on bow and spear; they are cruel, and have no mercy; their voice roareth like the sea; and they ride upon horses, set in array as men for war against thee, O daughter of Zion.

We have heard the fame thereof: our hands wax feeble; anguish hath taken hold of us, and pain, as of a woman in travail.

Go not forth into the field, nor walk by the way; for the sword of the enemy and fear is on every side.

YOUR HEALTH

Have you a little "trichophyton interdigitalis" in between your toes?

That's "athlete's foot."

It's a sort of fungus growth. One type of this disease causes the skin between the toes to become moist, soft and white, peeling off easily and leaving a reddened, shining area.

One who between the toes, or underneath the toes, frequently cracks, particularly that surrounding the little toe.

There may be itching and scaling of the skin.

The cause of swimming pools, dressing rooms and shower bath, favorite places for this fungus to fasten onto the foot.

Ringworm is another name for it.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

TO CREATE

WE OWE more of our happiness in this world to the creators than we ever give credit. Of course, we owe all to the Great Creator for placing all the tools for extended creation before us. What would Edison ever have done without the elements he had at his hand with which to experiment?

We have always had the air, and have known much about electricity for hundreds of years—yet only during the past few years have we been able to send the human voices across the seas and around the world over merely the waves of the air! Here I am on my little island, for from the whirl and hum of the great cities and a thousand miles from home—and yet the other evening, I turned on the radio in our camp and listened to the clear voice of my friend, Eddie Guest, who recited his poems from Chicago 3,000 miles away! How much we owe to the creators of the radio! Its marvelousness never deserts me. I never listen to it without a sort of reverence in my heart for the ones who cooperated with the Almighty toward its perfection.

I walked into a big city store recently and there saw displayed devices of which I had never heard—devices to bring comfort and convenience to the home and to individuals. Again I paid tribute to the creators.

For one, I praise the creators of the first books and all those which have followed. They have brought beauty and solace to millions of lives. To the creators of the automobile—especially to Mr. Ford—I bow in appreciation, for this creation has taken people from their homes, given them a greater view of the world, made them healthier, happier human beings, and given employment to millions, besides.

But great as are all these material creations which have come into the world to add to the comfort and growth of individuals and nations, the greatest creation of all is to create thought in the minds of people—that is, to stimulate them to think for themselves—thus to solve the many personal problems and aid the world in its upward life.

To think one's way out in this world is the great personal creation. Everything seems at hand for this purpose. The world is wide and large and opportunities are everywhere—most of them buried save to those who have eyes to see below the surface of things, and with imagination alert enough to explore!

Nature is forever creating. Change its manner—and it will immediately find another to take its place. To be great creators we must somehow absorb the everlasting spirit that permeates all nature.

Will Prosecute Egret "Marksmen"

Officers of the game commission are doing everything possible to put a stop to the ruthless killing of American egrets along the Conodoguinet creek and other water-ways. Ernest E. Harwood, executive secretary of the game commission announced today. The culprits, if caught, will be given the maximum penalty for such malicious shooting. The American egret, once virtually exterminated because of the value of its plumes in the millinery trade, has increased slowly during the past few years as a result of continuous protection.

Two of these beautiful snow-white birds, both wings badly shattered by shot, were found along the Conodoguinet creek near Orr's bridge recently by Alvin Seiders who put them out of their misery.

Secretary Harwood said that not only will this local area be kept under strict surveillance but also all other water-ways in the state where the birds are likely to occur.

Bass Fishermen Make Reports On "Big Ones"

The bass season is now in full swing, and with waters clear in many sections of the state, fine catches are being reported to the fish commission by wardens. A number of muskellunge have also been caught in waters in the northwestern section of the commonwealth.

Business is picking up in the correspondence section of the bureau of motor vehicles as well as in its registration section. In June correspondence section sent out 73,155 letters as against 43,869 in May, an increase of 29,286 for June.

NEW CODE FOR CORPORATIONS

Recent General Assembly Modernizes Statutes On Business.

Charters of incorporation signed by the governor became a thing of the past in Pennsylvania on July 3, when the new corporation act went into effect. Public service companies are the only exception. Hereafter when articles for the formation of a business corporation are filed in the office of the secretary of the commonwealth, and are found to conform to the requirement of the law, a certificate will be issued without action by the governor.

Prior to the adoption of the present constitution in 1874, corporate charters were granted only by act of the legislature, which acts were subject to approval or veto by the governor. Under that system a large part of the time of each session of the general assembly was taken up with bills providing for all manner of corporations.

During the fifty-nine years the general corporation act of 1

New York—Every schoolboy has heard of "Fulton's Folly," but how many have heard of "Shreve's folly?"

There is in Louisiana a thriving town named Shreveport, that Henry Shreve, for whom it was named, is virtually forgotten even there.

Captain Shreve was the Robert Fulton on the western waters. In 1816, while all Wheeling, West Virginia, was laughing at him, he laid the keel of the first of the boats that afterwards were to be identified with river transportation. He invented and piloted successfully the forerunner of the "Natchez" and the "Robert E. Lee" of classic racing fame.

The stories of Henry Shreve, of the famous race and of western river travel from its earliest days to its decline now are told by Garrett Laidlaw Eskew in "The Packet and the Packets," described as the first real story of the Mississippi steamboat.

The flavor of the golden days of steamboating flows through Eskew's account of an era that gave America Mark Twain and the sectional nickname "Dixie." For the name attached to the south was coined by the steamboatmen, who did their banking at the New Orleans Banque des Citoyens.

The bank's $10 notes were printed in French on one side, and from the large letters "DIX," signifying "10," came the term "dixies" and later "dixie's land," the latter meaning the town where the notes came from before it acquired a wider connotation.

Tells What Happens To High School Graduates

What happens these days to Pennsylvania high school graduates?

A barometer of the times is reflected in a graduate occupational survey just completed by the department of public instruction. With returns now available on graduates of the 1932 high school classes, the department gives comparisons for the three classes graduated in 1930, 1931, and 1932, which totaled, respectively, 44,700, 49,000, and 57,300.

The number of graduates remaining at home or going back to high school for post-graduate study increased in the past three years from 16 in each hundred to more than 38 in each hundred. Colleges received the largest single distribution in 1930 and 1931. Last year the "remaining at home" group was the largest. Those going to college totaled 12,000 of the 57,000 graduates in 1932. The stay-at-homes numbered about 16,500, not including almost 6,000 who returned to high school for advanced study.

Occupational comparisons for 1930 and 1932 show the following facts: In 1930 schools for nurses attracted 5.7 per cent of the high school graduates, and two years later this percentage dropped to 4.3. Commercial schools dropped from 4 per cent to 2.6. Stores and offices attracted 17 per cent of the 1930 graduates, but in 1932 only 8.2 per cent found jobs in these fields. Agriculture was the only general occupational field to gain, increasing from 1.8 per cent to 2.2. Factory work and trades declined from 5.6 per cent to 3.2. Under the heading of "other employment" the declines were from 8 per cent to 4.7 per cent. The percentage of unemployed, or those reporting they remained at home, more than doubled in the three year period, the actual increase being from 6,339, to 16,518, or 14 per cent to 28 per cent. Those going to college declined from 30.8 per cent to 21.5.

Cleveland, O. (AP).—One of the Grand Circuit's most famous trots was born under a cloud. How the Rainy Day Sweepstakes, worth $3,000 this year, got its damp name was recalled by George H. Tipton, manager of the local races, as a group of horsemen were spinning their customary yarns around track headquarters.

One rainy afternoon during the Grand Circuit meeting here in 1920 H. K. Devereux, long identified with the harness game, suggested that a new two-year-old trot be staged. The idea met with instant approval, but what to call the new event proved a stickler.

POISON CAUSES
LOSS OF TIME

Employees On Highways Exposed To Ivy Poison; Remedies Suggested.

The bureau of safety of the department of highways is battling no more stubborn enemy than poison ivy. Secretary S. Lewis reported today. This common weed, afflicted 338 highway workers last year, and resulted in a total loss of 1,887 days' time. Considerable success already has rewarded efforts made this year to reduce ivy poisoning.

From last year's experience the bureau of safety was enabled to list workers who appeared to have the greatest susceptibility to ivy poisoning. Effort has been made this year to remove these workers from exposure. As a preventive, prompt application of soapy water to hands and face immediately after working around poison ivy is required and has been found to be effective. Since the department's campaign

Hollywood Sights & Sounds

By Robin Coons

Hollywood—While a studio is casting about for a suitable Alice to send into a Wonderland of the talkies, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Norton are setting sail for England a journey that for both of them is a sort of celebration.

As often happens in Hollywood, several studios became interested in Lewis Carroll's classic at the same time. For many years before, it seemed, the Edgar Nortons were the only people in filmland who cared. They not only were interested, but at some pains they purchased from the heirs and estates of Carroll, of Savile Clark, who wrote the play, and of Walter Slaughter, who wrote the musical score, all picture rights.

An Early Start

Edgar Norton's sentimental attachment to "Alice" began when he was a 10-year-old boy in London. In the first production of the play he was the "March hare."

When Norton returned to the stage after schooling, it was not long before Richard Mansfield brought him to America. This was 30 years ago, and he has been here ever since, having become an American citizen.

"I tried once," he reminisces, "to have a production of 'Alice' in New York, but the Gerry society stepped in and forbade it. After playing in a number of Broadway hits, I came into pictures in 1916. I thought of 'Alice' for the screen then, but I felt a good picture could not be made without the delightful Carroll dialog. At last pictures talked—and that was when I began purchasing film rights."

'Alice,' Always 'Alice'

For several years, while the tall lean character actor who resembles Senator McAdoo was portraying screen butlers and prime ministers with dry humor and austerity, he and Mrs. Norton, who was now his agent, tried to sell "Alice."

"The results," he says, "were always disheartening. We interested many directors, and once a studio almost acted favorably. But they always decided that the story was only for children."

It was the stage that convinced Hollywood. Eva Le Gallienne's New York production and a revival in Pasadena brought out inquiries. Three studios planned to make the film, but the Nortons sold to Paramount.

"It's like an old dream come true," avers Norton, "just when I had given up hope!"

They'll be back in September, before the film production begins.

Hollywood—Something different in musical comedy personalities hit Hollywood when Marjorie White, just a bit more than a "half-pint" of concentrated cheerfulness, stepped from the New York cast of "Lady Fingers" to go talkie.

"Marge" began her theatrical career at the age of 2, singing from a high chair at an "amateur night" in Winnipeg, Canada. She won the prize, by the way. A grown young lady now, she almost needs the high chair still, for she is two inches less than five feet tall, and with her wavy head and blue eyes looks much like a little doll.

But she probably would be deeply offended if anyone suggested that, for one of her ambitions is to play adult romantic parts. In fact, to further that ambition, she recently bobbed the long golden curls which had hung almost to her waist throughout her life on the stage, which was begun professionally as a singer at the age of 4.

Not A Heavyweight, But—
Her manner, however remains

Widow On Trial

that of a little girl, as she goes about the studio lot, studying her script, or chatting with the gate-men, or being "kidded" by actor friends, which she takes good naturedly with the mock-plaintive comment, "See how they all pick on me!"

And tragedy has recently come into her life. She weighs only 103 pounds and now pitiless studio officials have ordered her to lose three of those.

"So I've got to diet," she explains at luncheon. "I guess I'll have just some orange juice," she tells the waitress, then reflectively, "... in some ham and eggs..."

At Random

Douglas Scott, the curly-headed kid of "Dynamite" and Marianne, is beginning early to master the foreign languages which soon may be essential to every screen star—he's studying four now. Rin-Tin-Tin is coming up in the world in the matter of "leading ladies." Armida, who was leading lady to John Barrymore in "General Crack," is to play with the celebrated dog in his second "barkie," called "On the Border."

Alexander Gray is to sing the lead in "Spring Is Here," musical comedy lately on Broadway. Loretta Young, who, by the way is engaged to Grant Withers, has had her contract renewed with a salary increase and has drawn the role of leading lady to John Barrymore in his next.

Concerning Rudy

Rudy Vallee, darling of the ladies, seems to be causing havoc among the stenographic forces of the studio making his first talkie. Whenever Rudy croons for the "mike" office girls appear as if by magic on his stage, to listen enraptured. But there are a few, just a few, who aver they "can't see him."

Rudy, himself, by the way, is having a high old time on his Hollywood jaunt, even if he is kept busy most of the time. Between shots on the sound stage he dictates his life story to be published soon.

Washington Highlights

By Herbert Plummer

Washington—When President Roosevelt dispatched that now famous telegram to Alabama respecting repeal of the eighteenth amendment, it was hailed generally as a daring move.

And it was so regarded, despite the fact that it was not the first time since F. D. R. became president that he has stirred amazement by his bold strokes.

Just how Leon McCord, national committeeman from Alabama, came to communicate with Roosevelt on this subject and why the president elected to wire him his reply, has never been revealed. Whether the stage was set ahead of time for this interchange perhaps only the principals know.

There was a significant thing, however, about the president's telegram to McCord. It was a carefully phrased document. He merely reiterated the stand he has taken since he was nominated. Repeal of the eighteenth amendment is a part of the democratic platform, and "I subscribe to that platform," was his statement.

Another Blast

The president has written another message since then, this time to "Big Jim" Farley, postmaster general and dispenser of patronage, which, from a political standpoint is perhaps more daring than the other.

At a time when "deserving democrats" are clamoring for jobs and democratic politicians are conducting intensive searches for nests of republican job holders to smoke out, the president asks for legislation that will remove more than 15,000 postmasters from the political rosters.

He has signed an executive order requiring examinations of all applicants for postmasterhips unless they were already qualified or regularly recommended.

He has requested Farley to draft necessary legislation for submission to congress next year making the change permanent by law.

The suddenness of the president's action startled the patronage-seekers. Then, remembering that not one nomination for a postmasterhip was sent to the capitol during the special session, they concluded that the plan had been in the back of Roosevelt's mind for a long time.

Which?

The question that interests political observers now is this: Does the administration propose, between now and the time the suggested change becomes law to pack in as many democrats as it can into postmasterhips? Or, knowing that where one appointment is made, perhaps half a dozen enemies result, is the administration looking for an easy way of handling this problem?

It's no secret that the average member of congress would gladly sign away his claims to patronage if he could do so with impunity. It often makes for them many more enemies than friends.

So, while at long range this proposed patronage operation might cause the patients to become panicky, after it is once performed many of them may breathe fervent sighs of relief.

Washington—There wasn't much advance notice of President Roosevelt's creation of a council to speed recovery plans.

When the announcement was made, press and public were quick to dub the new organization a "super-cabinet," and, although some observers maintain there is no justification for such a title, names of this type have a tendency to stick regardless.

Apparently what the president

Seized By Convicts

After a wild ride through three states as the prisoner of three escaped convicts, John C. Lyle, Crawfordville, Ga., rural mail carrier, was released unharmed near Wake Forest, N. C. (Associated Press Photo) did was to create a temporary "two-house" cabinet.

According to this classification, the first is a purely representative body composed of all those who have a finger in the effort to restore the nation's equilibrium. The second is strictly representative of those concerned with the normal processes of government.

Liaison

Members of the president's cabinet sit on the new recovery council apparently because they are the directing heads of the various parts of the recovery plan assigned to them.

Secretary Wallace, for example, has the duty of supervising the far-reaching farm relief act. Secretary Perkins is assigned the task of re-employment. Secretary Ickes has charge of the gigantic public works plan.

When President Roosevelt selected members of his cabinet, probably along with gauging their fitness to administer their particular departments, political considerations were not overlooked.

When congress returns in January and the political aspects of the legislative program have to be weighed, the pros and cons of the recovery administration and the regular affairs of the government must be considered in the light of the elections of next year.

For Example—

It is to be expected that the cabinet itself and not the newly created recovery council will be the place where these phases will come to light.

As an illustration, suppose the set-up of a particular state organization comes up at a meeting of the recovery council. In all probability discussions and recommendations on the subject will be made with the idea of obtaining the greatest degree of efficiency.

But it is likely that any political considerations arising in connection will be dealt with in the cabinet.

One thing about the "N. R. A." not generally understood, even in Washington, is the large part which industry itself played in nurturing the original germ of the present mighty plan for industrial recovery.

Various commentators, speculating as to the beginning of this giant of an idea, have surmised it must have been a product of the Roosevelt "brain trust." The truth is the professors of the brain trust appeared in the discussions only in the later stages as advisers on details. What actually took place was this:

Soon after the election last November, Mr. Roosevelt discussed with various business men what could be done to put industry on a firmer basis.

He was aware that in all serious depressions in the past it was the financial world itself which took the lead in applying remedies, while throughout this depression the government had been compelled to assume almost complete responsibility.

When this was mentioned, it was pointed out by the industrialists that in those former years of trial they had had a much freer hand to deal with economic crises.

There was no stringent anti-trust law then, providing jail sentences for those who put their heads together to peg prices or allot selling territory. There was no federal trade commission training its microscopes on trade practices.

What the industrialists did, in effect, was to challenge Mr. Roosevelt to remove the barriers. What Mr. Roosevelt did was to accept the challenge, inserting a few stipulations of his own into the contract. So the idea of chartering industry to solve its own problems was born.

Nurturing The Plan

Of course the child did not attain full stature overnight. There were repeated conferences at Albany.

The industrialists, to point their argument, cited what had happened in the textile industry.

Faced with ruinous over-production, the vast majority of textile operators had agreed that mills should stop operating on full day and-night schedules. But the small minority refused to agree, seizing instead the opportunity to increase their output while the majority was idling.

The mills which had agreed to curtail, although financially powerful enough to drive the dissenters out of business, dared not do so under the law. The whole plan collapsed, and textiles took another tail-spin through the dark clouds of depression.

The point went home. To the original suggestion of fewer trade prohibitions was coupled the suggestion of trade practice code which would be legally binding.

A Challenge Accepted

As early as Christmas week, a small group who had seen the president-elect come away with minds filled with the dawning conception of what was to come.

Naturally, organized labor and others were consulted as matters shaped up. Mr. Roosevelt saw to that. Naturally, the plan turned out finally pleasing to most of the professors, who for years had been teaching greater regimentation of business.

But as to the ultimate origin of the now famous "N. R. A." there can be no doubt: it represents Mr. Roosevelt's acceptance (on his own terms, it is true) of a challenge and a promise made originally by industry itself.
